Casebook I: Faculty Employment Policies

Casebook I: Faculty Employment Policies presents six cases that were developed by the Project on Faculty Appointments at the Harvard Graduate School of Education. The book is co-edited by Professor James P. Honan and Cheryl Sternman Rule, who are both experts in labor and employment law. The casebook includes six cases that highlight particular challenges regarding faculty employment policies. Each case study is accompanied by teaching notes to help professors integrate the material into their courses.

The casebook covers a range of topics, including faculty appointments, collective bargaining, and academic freedom. It is intended for use in law school courses on higher education law, labor law, or employment law.

The book includes contributions from other experts in the field, such as Professor Marion Crain, an expert in labor and employment law, who is Vice Provost for Faculty Affairs at Harvard. The casebook is an excellent resource for law school faculty and students who want to learn more about the complexities of faculty employment policies.

Conclusion

In conclusion, Casebook I: Faculty Employment Policies is an important resource for law school faculty and students who want to learn more about the complexities of faculty employment policies. The book is well-written and includes a range of case studies that highlight the challenges facing faculty appointments. With its clear and concise writing style, this book will be an invaluable addition to any law school library.
