With no way for fans to verify their facts, the sportswriters of the 1920s enjoyed a near monopoly on sports news. Journalist Mark Inabinett explores the sportswriters who shaped the history of sports through their writing. In Grantland Rice and His Heroes: The Sportswriter as Mythmaker in the 1920s, Inabinett examines the life and work of Grantland Rice, a key figure in the development of modern sportswriting.

Rice was born in Murfreesboro, Tennessee, on November 1, 1880. He was the son of Bolling Rice, a physician, and Mary Prater Rice. After attending the University of Tennessee, Rice worked as a journalist for the Nashville Banner and then for the Nashville News. He moved to New York City in 1910, where he became a sportswriter for the New York Herald Tribune.

Inabinett captures the essence of the Golden Age of Sports in the 1920s, highlighting the impact of sportswriting on modern-day society. He shows how Rice's writing influenced the development of the modern sportswriting industry and how his stories and columns set a standard for coverage and analysis.

Grantland Rice and His Heroes: The Sportswriter as Mythmaker in the 1920s is a comprehensive exploration of Rice's life and work, offering readers a glimpse into the history of sportswriting and the role of the sportswriter as mythmaker.
