Marcus Garvey: Black Nationalist Crusader And Entrepreneur

Brenda Haugen

Marcus Garvey: Black Nationalist Crusader And Entrepreneur

Marcus Garvey was born August 17, 1887. He was a publisher, journalist, entrepreneur, crusader for black nationalism, and founder of the Universal Negro Improvement Association, which he established in 1914. His mission was to promote African independence and to encourage black people to return to Africa. Marcus Garvey's ideas were based on the belief that black people should have control over their own destinies and that Africa should be independent from European control.

Garvey's influence was global, and his ideas were adopted by many other black leaders, including Malcolm X and Marcus Mosiah Garvey. His ideas continue to be celebrated today, and his legacy is still felt in the struggle for black liberation and independence.