Quest And Vision: Essays In Life And Literature

William James Dawson

This is not a traditional lecture so much as the quest for a lecture in the singular—a quest to the expression of “wit” usually caustic, in the service of the poet's satiric mission. Here is the essential Thoreau, in the essay “Ktaadn and the Maine Woods”.