Raymond Harris-Ching was a world-renowned bird painter and artist, born in Wellington, New Zealand. His work has been assessed and rejected as one of the best in the British Isles. He is considered one of the most important bird artists in the world. His paintings have been widely collected and are now on display at the Gallery in Aesop's Kiwi Fables: Paintings by Ray Ching.

Raymond Harris-Ching was born in 1939, also known as Raymond Harris-Ching. He is the only school experience that proved invaluable to Ray Harris-Ching. His love for birds and nature began at a young age, and he continued to develop his skills throughout his life. His paintings have been widely displayed in museums and galleries around the world, and his work is now considered a significant contribution to the world of bird art.

One of his most notable works is the Aesop's Kiwi Fables exhibition, which features paintings of New Zealand's native birds and animals. The exhibition has received critical acclaim and has been featured in numerous publications and exhibitions.

Raymond Harris-Ching's work is not only admired for its beauty and technical excellence, but also for its emotional depth and the poignant stories it tells. His paintings are a testament to his dedication to capturing the beauty of New Zealand's natural world, and his contribution to the art world is widely celebrated.